

Best Practices for Successful Preparation of P&T Dossiers Office of the Senior Vice President and Provost

For departments and chairs:

- Department chairs have overall responsibility for preparing P&T dossiers that are timely, and that meet departmental, college, and university guidelines.
- Candidates should use their college's standard templates for the CV and portfolio summary (Tab 2). It is helpful if the CV and portfolio clearly distinguish accomplishments and activity since the last promotion or initial appointment (in cases for which this is the first ISU P&T action) at ISU.
- Candidates will prepare and submit a “Factual Summary” as part of Tab 1 of their P&T package. The template of the “Factual Summary” is posted on the SVPP website.
- The Position Responsibility Statement (PRS) should be unique to each faculty member. The PRS should accurately reflect the expectations for each area of responsibility preferably using weighted percentages. The PRS serves as the benchmark for gauging faculty productivity when evaluating promotion and tenure cases.
- Teaching loads vary across disciplines and within departments. The P&T materials should accurately reflect a candidate’s actual teaching load and be consistent with actual teaching activity reported for recent years, not the departmental average. Where a candidate’s teaching load diverges significantly from the departmental norm, this divergence should be clearly explained.
- Peer teaching evaluations provide a valuable perspective in addition to the numerical student teaching evaluation scores. Each candidate should include a summary of their peer teaching evaluations in Tab 2 (Portfolio Summary) for those candidates with teaching responsibilities. The original peer teaching evaluation reports may be included by the department in Tab 3.
- Student teaching evaluation scores presented in tabular format should be included in every Tab 2 (Portfolio Summary). Evaluations should be forwarded using the institutional standard of 1=very poor and 5=excellent. Comparative departmental data must be provided. Candidates should address any negative trends in their teaching evaluation record, particularly sustained deviations from the departmental average.
- While placement of articles in top tier journals is an important criteria, we expect the department and college to place more emphasis on the impact of the candidate’s scholarship.
- Report citations of publications using conventional tools accepted in the discipline, such as the Web of Science database, Google Scholar, and h-index.

- Institutional service activities (e.g., committee service) should not be included as extension or outreach activities.
- The chair should meet with the departmental P&T committee at the start of the process to deliver the committee's charge and to review expectations, conflict of interest, and process. Once the entire P&T review process is concluded and final decisions delivered, the chair should again meet with the committee to review outcomes and to assess expectations and process, with an emphasis on continuous improvement.
- The departmental P&T committee's report should be evaluative and analytical in its presentation of the case. Disciplinary standards for research/creative activities should be provided as context for non-experts evaluating the dossier. Include the name of the chair of the departmental P&T committee and names of the faculty members who served on that committee in the departmental report.
- Departments are responsible for obtaining letters from external referees. The Faculty Handbook Section 5.3.3.2 specifies a "maximum" of six letters and a "minimum" of four. Departments should make every effort to secure six (6) external letters.
  - At least one, but no more than three, of the external letters should come from referees suggested by the candidate as supported by the Faculty Handbook 5.3.3.1.
  - Referees should be among the top faculty in their discipline who are at or above the rank being sought and at institutions having equivalent or higher stature than Iowa State.
  - Major professors, post-doctoral advisors, and former students should not be selected as external referees. Co-PIs, co-authors, and research collaborators should also be excluded except in very unusual circumstances that should be explained.
  - Other than in exceptional cases, departments should not obtain multiple letters from the same institution – and if that is done, they must explain why.
  - A copy of the letter sent to external referees should be included.
  - The referee log should be complete and show whether the candidate or department chose each referee. In Part II of the log, departments should give a several-sentence-long statement of why that evaluator was chosen.
  - The bio-sketch for external referees should be brief (no more than a page). Under no circumstances should the entire vita of any evaluator be forwarded in the dossier.
- Whenever possible, only faculty at or above the rank for which a candidate is being considered should vote on promotion, e.g., associate professors should not vote on cases for promotion to full professor. We strongly discourage the practice of having untenured faculty vote on cases for promotion and tenure. We encourage departments that allow it to reconsider the practice.

- Faculty input into Promotion and Tenure cases is an important part of shared governance and abstentions undermine this principle. It is the responsibility of each faculty member who is eligible to vote to evaluate the merits of each case and to provide a recommendation by casting a vote.
- While it may not be possible for the department chair to address the exact reason for negative votes, the chair should make some effort to address the reasons and/or provide some context where appropriate.
- If there are loose ends in the case, such as the status of a Ph.D. student who is expected to graduate soon or who may have graduated, or a pending grant or publication, the chair should conduct the necessary fact-finding and include that information in his/her letter.
- The chair's letter should clearly state what the standard expectations are for scholarship in the candidate's particular discipline (e.g., "the gold standard is" published conference proceedings, juried exhibits, single-authored journal articles, case studies, etc.)
- The chair's letter to the dean must be analytical, candid and evaluative. It should point out, discuss, and analyze any weaknesses in the case, and any aspects of the process that are unusual or of concern. We suggest the following format: 1) description of departmental review process; 2) synopsis of case; 3) evaluation of any concerns; and 4) chair's recommendation on the case.
- The issue of timing of the promotion should be addressed in the chair's letter, particularly if the promotion can be considered early (fewer than six years in rank) or if the interval between promotions is lengthy.
- When there are concerns in a candidate's case, the chair's letter should describe feedback given to the candidate through the written annual or preliminary (third-year) reviews, mentoring interventions, and proactive measures taken by the candidate (for instance, receiving training from CELT to address low teaching scores).

For colleges and deans:

- The dean should meet with the college P&T committee at the start of the process to deliver the committee's charge and to review expectations, conflict of interest, and process. Once the entire P&T review process is concluded and final decisions delivered, the dean should again meet with the committee to review outcomes and to assess expectations and process, with an emphasis on communication and continuous improvement.
- The name of the chair of the college P&T committee and names of the faculty members who served on that committee should be included in their report.

- The dean's letter to the provost must be analytical, candid, and evaluative. It should point out, discuss, and analyze any weaknesses in the case, and any aspects of the process that are unusual or of concern. We suggest the following format: 1) description of the review process; 2) synopsis of case; 3) evaluation of any concerns; and 4) dean's recommendation on the case.
- The issue of timing of the promotion should be addressed in the dean's letter, particularly if the promotion can be considered early (fewer than six years in rank) or if the interval between promotions is lengthy.
